

WALL STREET
JOURNAL

JAN 10 1967

Senate supervision of the CIA was informally expanded, apparently ending the long-standing controversy over who should be included among the monitors of the big intelligence agency. Sen. Russell (D., Ga.), chairman of the special CIA-supervisory panel, made up of Armed Services and Appropriations committee members, invited Sens. Fulbright (D., Ark.), Mansfield (D., Mont.) and Hickel (R., Iowa), ranking members of the Foreign Relations Committee, to attend a briefing by CIA director Richard Helms.